

SULLIVAN DON'T LIKE CORBETT.

Janky Bob Fitzsimmons and Old John L. Discuss the Fighters.

OLD RIVALS LIKELY TO MEET.

May Engage in Six-Round Contest For Ex-Champion's Benefit in Boston—Fitz Is Really Anxious.

According to a dispatch from Boston Robert Fitzsimmons, former heavyweight champion of the world, has decided to box James J. Corbett, another former champion, six rounds at the benefit performance to be given for John L. Sullivan.

This announcement is peculiarly interesting because it is known that Fitzsimmons has been trying to arrange a real battle with Corbett for a long time, but has not been able to accomplish it.

There is a bitter feeling between the two men, not only professionally, but personally, and on this account their boxing contest for John L. would be watched with the closest attention.

Fitzsimmons' feeling toward Corbett is made out in clear light in a conversation between the two men which was given here.

Fitzsimmons, accompanied by his manager, called on John L. at his sister's home on Broadway, Boston, Tuesday. The two men were sitting at a table in the room and were talking over a bottle of beer.

"I was in the ring with you," said Fitzsimmons, "and I know you are a good fighter. I would like to see you again."

"I would like to see you again," said Corbett, "but I don't think I can do it. I am not in the best of health."

"I don't think I can do it," said Fitzsimmons, "but I would like to see you again."

"We absolutely draw the color line," said Murphy this morning. "We have never matched with Turner, or any other negro, and we never will. Let the black men fight it out among themselves and have colored champions if they want to. But no negro goes for us."

Sosso had the titular part, and as in his previous appearance he read his lines with precision and fidelity, though he acted better than he "looked." One cannot help feeling that he should have his hair cut before he steps aboard the San Jacinto again. His present cut may be artistic from the Paderewski viewpoint, but as a dashing hero of the United States navy, never! In last night's performance there were two particularly bright spots. First and foremost was James Corrigan as Coxswain Jack Dudley. The Salt Lake public has now seen him in three roles as dissimilar as can well be imagined, and in each he has proved himself an actor of ability. Rarely, in fact, is a better character actor seen. His versatility is altogether out of the ordinary and one wonders why he is not identified with some larger organization. His Jack Dudley was a piece of most excellent work and clearly entitled him to the generous reception he was accorded. The second bright spot was little Mabel, the clever Maitland child, who forced her way into the private office of the president and secured the reprieve that saved the Ensign's life. Unless all signs fail, this tot has something more in her make up than precocity. Under proper training it is not difficult to see a promising future for her. Her's was the part of Mary, and she played it like a veteran. Nina Maitland did the part of Mrs. Wilkes in excellent fashion, and most of the other members of the company were satisfactory. The Salt Lake public will be glad to see three more performances of "The Ensign," tonight, tomorrow night, and tomorrow afternoon.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

Tonight two notable interesting events will take place, the musical recital by Arthur Shepherd and Willard White at the Theater, and the grandly dance at Christensen's, the latter to be the last of the series.

Mrs. Sinclair and Miss Sinclair gave a delightful afternoon function today in honor of Miss Laura Hird.

Yesterday witnessed the 7th birthday of John Macdonald, and the event was celebrated in the usual royal entertainment with which the anniversary have come to be noted. The hospitality of the host and hostess is proverbial and last night's event in no way fell behind the past demonstration. There was an elaborate repast at 6 o'clock, followed by a program of music, recitations, and dancing, the long table, beautifully decorated with American flowers and other flowers, seating over 60 guests. Among these were President Joseph F. Smith, Counselor John R. Winder, Patriarch John Smith, Elders C. W. Penrose, Angus M. Cannon and Joseph E. Taylor, with other Church dignitaries, the entire evening being most delightfully spent.

The annual meeting of the Daughters of Pioneers took place yesterday at the home of the founder and first president, Mrs. A. E. Hyde, on North Temple street. There was a consideration of some business, followed by an enjoyable program of recitations and addresses, among the last being a talk by Mrs. Zina Y. Card on the early pioneer days and the assassination of the Prophet Joseph. Mrs. Alice K. Smith gave a sketch of the society's founder, Mrs. Hyde, and her zeal and loyal effort in the work of making it a success.
